We can all use someone to talk to when things become overwhelming. Whether the need is to process a traumatic experience, help navigate your anxiety and depression, or empathetically listen and help, I am here in a non-judgmental, safe, and comforting environment. My goal as a therapist is to help clients reach their greatest potential by creating a safe space and a client-centered approach to counseling. I am a Licensed Professional Counselor Associate (LPCA) who enjoys working with diverse individuals across all ages and populations. I received my Master of Arts in Clinical Mental Health Counseling from the University of the Cumberlands. As a mental health professional, I am trained in treating anxiety, depression, grief, and PTSD.

I use cognitive behavioral therapy, solution-focused therapy, reality therapy, trauma resolution, and other empirically researched models to treat the needs of each client. I am available in person or online. Contact me at michelle.benverlpc@gmail.com. I would be honored to assist you on your journey to healing and self-awareness.
